

Freelance translators needed

Seas At Risk is looking for professional and experienced freelance translators, to translate from English into Greek, Romanian, Dutch, Danish and Polish.

The translation is a collection of examples developed by pioneering communities from across Europe on how to prevent and reduce single use plastic. These examples will be used to develop a multilingual and interactive map to inspire communities, public administrations, businesses, NGOs and governments to prevent single use plastic and encourage them to reduce plastic pollution at the source.

The translation project amounts to approximately 23k words (catalogue) a press release, some social media posts and other keywords for the buttons of the website or a short video. The text will be provided in a word format. The translation will have to be completed by end of January.

Please contact stironi@seas-at-risk.org ASAP.